P.G. DIPLOMA IN TRANSLATION STUDIES

The PG Diploma in Translation Studies, comprising two consecutive semesters spread over one academic year, commenced from the session 2009-2010 under the UGC SAP scheme in the Department of English, Sambalpur University.

The course seeks to promote:

- Translation of canonical texts from English/Oriya/Hindi/Bengali
- Understanding of India and other countries, their regions, societies, and cultures comparatively through translations
- Research and training in translation including translation of non-literary texts
- Linkages with translation study centres and other such organizations in and outside the country that may contribute to the teaching and research in the related fields
- Building of specialized library collections on translation studies and translated texts in English/Oriya/Hindi/Bengali
- Translation of technical terms used in both literary and non-literary areas

Course Information:

The course carries a 32 credit load, and 800 marks, divided equally between the two semesters. It comprises 320 teaching hours, of which the First Semester will cover 160 teaching hours devoted to discussion of the Oriya, Hindi and English translations of culturally important texts in various genres through seminars and workshops. The performance of students in the seminars and workshops will be assessed by the faculty of the department. The Second Semester will also be of 160 hours duration, which will be devoted to lectures on the theoretical issues involved in translation.

Semester Wise Distribution of Course Contents

First Semester- Four courses in the form of Workshop

2 courses for Interaction in the Workshop

2 courses for Presentation in the Workshop

4 Credit load each (Total 16 credit load)

Second Semester- Four courses on translation theory

4 Credit load each (Total 16 credit load)

PGDTS-005, PGDTS-006, PGDTS-007 and PGDTS-008

First Semester: Translation Studies

The teacher will initiate the workshop by familiarizing the students with the translation from the original English/Oriya/Hindi/Bengali. The texts to be used can be lyrics, short stories and excerpts of longer works such as novels and autobiographies and non-literary texts. The teacher's focus will be on the linguistic, formal, cultural and ideological aspects of semantic transfer in the translations in question. This will be interactive in nature. Performance of the students will be evaluated by the teachers concerned (PGDTS-001 and PGDTS-002).

In the presentation phase, the students shall be asked to translate selected texts themselves and make presentations, comparing the translation with the original. Presentation of the students will be evaluated by the teachers concerned (PGDTS-003 and PGDTS-004).

Second Semester: Translation Studies

This course examines the main theoretical concepts currently discussed in translation studies, and demonstrates how they influence translation practice. By taking a cultural studies approach, rather than a purely linguistic approach, the course seeks to explore the impact of translation as a force for change and to trace the ways in which texts are received by readers in different cultural contexts. The course is to introduce the notion of a cultural transfer in relation to literary and cultural texts. Particular attention will be paid to the notions of influence, translation, reception and power relations. This semester will have four courses.
